Utmost Hospitality

The story that I am going to tell you really happened. It is a true account.

A stranger once became the guest in the home of a very poor villager. The host was so poor, in fact, that he had nothing whatsoever to offer his guest to eat or drink. He said to his guest, "I am sorry, but I do not have anything to offer you to eat or drink, but would you be pleased if I were to dance for you and sing a song for you?"

This shows how hospitable people in the Turkish villages are
